WORK FOR SUCCESS

SAVING YOUR BUSINESS TIME AND MONEY

Did you know that every year, thousands of employable men and women are released from prison in New York State? Many of them are already working. You want your business to succeed. They want to succeed and help you succeed, too. The policy of New York State and Governor Andrew M. Cuomo is to help reduce recidivism, promote economic development and improve public safety throughout New York State by helping people with prior criminal convictions find employment.

BENEFITS TO EMPLOYERS

FREE HUMAN RESOURCES SERVICES

The Work for Success program matches qualified, trained job applicants who have criminal convictions to your open job orders at no cost to you.

APPLICANT TRAINING

Work For Success ensures that the job applicants we send to your business have already received training or have experience in applicable job skills. Department of Labor staff can also work with your business to create a specific training program for any new or existing positions.

NO-COST FEDERAL BONDING

You and your business can be insured for free by the federal government for up to $25,000 for any loss of money or property.

WORK OPPORTUNITY TAX CREDIT (WOTC)

Your business can earn the WOTC federal tax credit when you hire disadvantaged candidates. This includes when you hire a new employee with a previous felony conviction. The maximum tax credit for each new hire is $2,400. To be eligible for the full credit, the employee must work at least 400 hours during the tax year. You may be eligible for a partial credit for eligible employees who work at least 120 hours. You can get the WOTC for employees with either federal or state convictions. If the new employee was convicted of a misdemeanor or lesser offense, the employee may still be eligible under a different WOTC category.

To claim the credit, your business must submit Form 5884 with your normal federal tax return.

THE FACTS

- By law, an employer cannot have a blanket policy against hiring anyone with a criminal record
- Research shows no higher incidence of workplace crime, violence, dishonesty or theft committed by people with a criminal record
- One in four adults of working age have a criminal record
- Two in three men were working and paying taxes before they were incarcerated
- The overwhelming majority of workplace violence is committed by outsiders, not employees

NEW YORK STATE LAW

EMPLOYERS CANNOT ASK ABOUT ARRESTS OR CRIMINAL ACCUSATIONS:

- That were resolved in an individual's favor
- That were resolved by a youthful offender adjudication
- That resulted in a sealed conviction

EMPLOYERS CAN ASK ABOUT:

- An arrest or criminal accusation that is currently pending
- Arrests or criminal accusations that were not resolved in an individual's favor

However, you cannot not refuse to hire someone because he or she has been previously convicted of one or more criminal offenses, or because of a belief that a conviction record indicates a lack of "good moral character," unless:

- There is a direct relationship between one or more of the previous criminal offenses and the employment sought or held
- Employing or continuing to employ the person would involve an unreasonable risk to property or to the safety or welfare of specific individuals or the general public

The New York State Human Rights Law applied throughout the state protects:

- People with prior arrest records that were favorably resolved or resulted in sealed convictions or youthful offender adjudications
- People with prior criminal conviction records The employer's obligations under these protections are in separate sections of the Human Rights Law, which impose different requirements.
- Employers should consult with their own attorneys about the specific application of the law. Employers should be aware that some municipalities have separate requirements for businesses within their jurisdictions. Therefore, employers should also consult local law about whether, and under what circumstances, it is permissible to ask applicants and employees about their criminal history
